MARRYING TITLES.

ple are surprised, and some pe lly indignant, at the havoe made ng our marriageable American women by ers with titles. Not only girls, just budding into society, bouncing mature widows being carried over the ocean avenoodles begin to feel in the shade if they cannot announce an expected visit from " our daughter, the Marchioness of Dryrot," "our dear child, the Countess Car-

HENRY LABOUCHERE has explained the desire of the foreign nobility to seek American wives. Girls in England are awkward, red-elbowed, large-footed, badly dressed hoydenish misses, with giggling propensitie and no conversational powers. American girls are handsome, natural, always at ease, a little "cheeky," well dressed, good conversationalists and free from the smell of bread-and-butter. He declares that England will continue to be overcrowded with old maids until English girls realize these facts and become Americanized.

principal attraction of American women, however, is the fact that they have money and can do with it generally what they please. The worst use they can put it to is to bestow it on a beggarly foreigner because he happens to possess a title. They would do better to spend it on home manu

ANNA DICKINSON'S CLAIM.

Miss ANNA DICKINSON has not been fairly treated by the Republican National Committee. Apart from the question of the legal status of her claim for the $1,250 for which she sues the Committee, there has been an attempt to belittle the services she rendered in the campaign. Miss DICKINSON has spoken for the Republican cause ever since the party was founded, and her addresses during the war certainly were patriotic, inspiriting and useful. Honacz GREE-LEY, were he living to-day, would appreciate her efforts, and no unkind word in relation to her would be suffered to appear in the

The members of the Committee ought to pay Miss Dickinson's claim, if they do so out of their own pockets. They won enough money on election bets to afford to give her five times the amount she demands as her right. It is a picayune business to mar the celebration of a great political victory by trying to beat a woman of genius, who has of the Grand Central Hotel shortly after 5 o'clock belped to secure it, out of a few dollars. The Grand Old Party is not a Good Old

The Grand Jury investigation of the Secaucus meadows mystery has brought out the fact that the dead woman was not the tramp, Marka Kino, after all. The Paterson Chief of Police was mistaken when he supposed that he identified the body. The crime will now, it is housed he have the body that the identified the body. The window of his room was found ones this room was found ones this erime will now, it is hoped, be brought to light if the woman was the victum of foul play.

Major JOHN A. BUTLER, who conducted Mayor Hewitt's canvass in Harlem, is now called upon to fight a campaign in the courts. Three wives are after him. The Major, who talked a great deal about honesty during the election, has been a repeater at the ballot-box of matrimony.

THE RIGHT WILL ALWAYS WIN.

A Note from John Shephard, Who Adopted the Orphan Josie.

To the Editor of The Evening World:

I take the pleasure of writing you these few lines to thank you for all that you have done for us. My mother also thanks you. I hope that you will continue in all such good works. It will teach the Juvenile Asylum authorities not to be too hasty again in their action. It was a hard fight, but the right will always win against the wrong. I held a big party here on the 27th of last mouth in honor of Josie Shephard's safe return home again. We had 100 people in the house at the party. I am sending Josie to the German school. He is learning German and English. Yours respectfully, John Shephard,

THE WORLD. HELPING HARRISON.

More Remarkable Combinations for His Benefit.

He Certainly Should Be Able to Patch Up a Cabinet.

Gen. Graball Will Be There.

Secretary of State, Nobody to blame (Blaine); Secretary of Treasury, Gen. Graball; Secretary of Yreasury, Gen. Glas-all; Secretary of War, J. O'Donovan Roaster; Secretary of Navy, Graves End Hertzberg; Postmaster General, Let her go Gallagher; Attorney General, Judge Crush 'em. RICHARD A. NATHAN.

A Dinmond Cabinet.

Secretary of State, James G. Blaine; Secretary of War, Baby Anson; Secretary of the Treasurer C. H. Byrne: Secretary of the Navy, Mike Kelly: Secretary of the Interior. Jim Mutrie: Postmaster-General, Adonis Terry. If this Cabinet can be beaten by bet-ter known persons, I would like to see it done. Yours respectfully, Home Plate.

Quite a Constellation.

To the Editor of The Evening World : Here's my Cabinet, For Secretary of State, J. G. Blaine; Secretary of Treasury, Dr. Mc-Glynn: Secretary of War, Lew Wallace; Secretary of Navy, Rear-Admiral Luce; Secretary of Interior, Grover Cleveland; Postmaster-General, Belva Lockwood; At-torney-General, Clinton B. Fisk; Secretary of Agriculture, some hayseed. E. P. FLANNERY, 2129 Fifth avenue, New York.

Murchison for Private Secretary.

I beg to submit the following as eminently mitable: Secretary of State, Pat Ford; Treasury, John McMackin; Army, Corpl. Tanner; Navy, Mr. Dudley, of Indiana; Interior, B. B. Elkins; Attorney-General, ex-Judge Terry, of California; Postmaster-General, cxJudge Terry, of California; Postmaster-General, J. J. Coogan, of New Yotk. Your space does not permit of suggestions as to other appointments, but I would wish briefly to urge the claims of Mr. Finnerty as Minister to England, with Mr. Carnegie as his Secretary of Legation. It would be ungrateful to forget the services of Mr. Murchison, who would make an admirable private secretary to Mr. Harrison.

531 East Twelftn street.

A Very Decent Collection.

In the Editor of The Eventua World : Let me try my hand at Cabinet-making. Here goes: For Secretary of State, John Sherman: Treasury, William B. Allison; War, Gen. Lew Wallace: Navy, William P. Frye: Interior, Warner Miller, Postmaster, General, Gen. Russeil A. Alger; Attorney-General—weil, I will leave that office for Gen. Harrison to till. If John Sherman won't take the State Department, I nominate Senator George F. Hoar. W. E. W.

What a Galaxy.

I would suggest the following Cabinet for President, Harrison; Secretary of State,
"Wood-Pulp" Miller, of New York; Secretary of the Treasury, "Soap" Dorsey, of New Mexico; Secretary of the Interior,
"Floater" Dudley, of Indiana; Secretary of War, "House on Fire" Foraker, of Ohio;
Secretary of the Navy, "Territorial Statesman" Elkins, of no place in particular; Postmaster-General, "Old Su'sidy" Pomeroy, of Kansas; Attorney-General, "Landufor President, Harrison; Secretary of State, roy, of Kansas; Attorney-General, "Landlet" Williams, of Oregon. J. W. Roach.

A GUEST'S FRIGHTFUL FALL

Six Stories to the Stone Courtyard of Grand Central Hotel.

A cry of agony rang through the empty corridors this morning, startling the newly awakened help and causing much hurry and excitement.

Other cries and groans were heard and on opening the door of the court-yard a middle-aged man, who was recognized as a guest at the hotel, was found tring on the stone door terribly crushed and unconscious. An ambulance took nim to M. Vincen's hospital, where his right leg was found to be badly fractured. He had sustained severe internal pulsaries.

The window of his room was found open this morning and there were scratches on the paint which showed that the man had got on the sill for some purpose and had either failen or thrown himself to the yard, six stories below.

Mass Mary Anderson probably wearled of eter-nally hearing her setting criticised as coldly cor-rect but without any real emotional intensity. The has been dinned into her ears ever since she first appeared on the stage, and even compliments become monotonous, you know. Her Juliet, her Rosalind, her Papline all delighted the eye, but left the heart untouched, she was told.

No I imagine I see Miss Anderson one fine morning in the agony of deep meditation. "I evidently shall never be socepted," she says, "in the rôle of the young, love-stirred girl. They tell me that as I have never felt this emotion I cannot ac t. That may be. But I will not be discouraged When Mahomet found that the mountain would not come to him, why, he set out, like a brave little man, bought his ticket, and went to the moun tain. The right sort of a role does not seem to come to me. I will seek it." Miss Anderson selected "The Winter's Tale," and certainly the dual rate of Hermione and Perdita calls for no very depta-moving passion. In Bermione there is denunciatory and conjuga distress; in Perdita sportiveness and comedy.

And before going any further, it must be easid that Miss Anderson was eminently successful. Her success, indeed, was not one that can for a moment be questioned. Her performance was triumph. deal with the most overwhelming of human emo tions, we might have suspected Miss Anderson o The quiet dignity of her Hermione and the exquisite pustoral abandon of her Perdita night have led us to think that she could have been equally successful as Junet. But this we knew was not the case-more's the pity. In ** The Winter's Tale " Miss Anderson has made a wise and artistic selection. In this play she has never before been seen to such advantage.

The distress of a wife and the despair of maiden are two such utterly different emotions The former comes from wounded, conjugal affect tion; the latter from blighted, unsatisf dominated by unconscious sexuality. The external expression of these emotions may be the same, but the internal rage is different. And Miss Anderson, in the platonic grief of Hermsone showed consummate ability. She could understand and grapple with affection-calm, enduring, noble wifely affection. It is so much easier to analyze and so much more wholesome, too, if we would only be lieve it, than the stormy insanity of unsatisfie love. Miss Anderson was absolutely impressive In the trial scene her resignation was truly pa thetic. To think that she should have wasted s much time demonstrating the fact that the passic of sullet was utterly incomprehensible to when to such a role as Hermione she could bring such admirable platonic intensity!

There is the error of the aspirant. "I want t go upon the stage," she says. "Kagage me s 'Romeo and Juliet' company." A girl would feel slighted if you told her you didn't think she thoroughly realized Juliet.

The chauge from Hermione to Perdita was mos rtistically managed. Miss Anderson's voice was different in the roles. She kept her deep, contraite tones for Hermione, and her lighter, more soprano notes for Perdita. And what a revelation she was as her own daughter! Mr. Abbey could not charge a price that would not be worth a sight of that dance in Act IV. Miss Anderson looked radiantly beautiful in repose, but in the dance with its delightfully unusual movements, it is quite impossible to do her justice with cold pen and ink I would never have believed that she could have danced like that. She aroused the audience to enhusiasm, and they wanted her to abandon hersel to 'erpsichore three times. An American audien s very greedy. Oliver Twist asked timidly for "two servings;" an American audience noisily demands more until it succumbs to satisty. Mis that she was emmently wise. As the statue in the last act Miss Anderson again charmed her audience. She was a magnificent picture. Standing at the top of a flight of stone steps, clad in severely classic garbs, inclosed in rich purple curtains and in a cold, white, dazzling light, Miss Anderson was wonderfully beautiful, startling.

Anderson would not aratify the third demand. In "The Winter's Tale" was admirably put upor the stage. There was nothing extravagant about the production. The scenery was not extraords pary, not nearly as sumptuous as the settings a the Broadway Theatre, but it was most effective. adroit management.

The company was thoroughly good. It was not The company was thoroughly good. It was not marred by the indifferent performance of any one member. It was admirably trained. It would have done credit to Augustin Daly, A. M. Palmer, or Daniel Frohman, the three princes of company organizers. J. H. Harnes was a capital Leontes, and Mrs. John Bulington an effective Paulina. Miss Zeffe Tibbury and Miss Mary Ayeton were respectfully good as Mopsa and Doreus, and J. G. Taylor an efficient route. Now onder the Londoners appreciated "The Winter's Tale." ALAN DALE.

While slitting in his house last night, Mr. Still-man heard a plaintive wail, and he agreed with his wife that it was a ionesome kitten. The noise continued, and sounded more and more human, and finally Mr. and Mrs. Stillman opened their front door and were sur-prised to see a pretty infant bundled up in their vestibule. It wore a red bood and was comforta-bly dressed.
